Feb 2, 2009

Forty-nine public gardens in Europe, Asia, Canada and the U.S.A. are first to display new Fleuroselect Gold Medal plant introductions chosen for special merit.

These 49 public gardens include botanical and display gardens, arboreta, parks and college campuses. Key settings and accessibility to the public are among the main reasons for choosing these locations to display Fleuroselect Gold Medal Winners.

Among them are gardens in Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, India, Italy, Japan, The Netherlands, N. Ireland, Norway, six in the United States, and seven in the United Kingdom.

What is Fleuroselect?

Fleuroselect is, according to press releases, an international organization for testing, promoting and protecting new varieties of annuals and perennials. Though the organization began in Frankfurt, Germany in May 1970, its headquarters are now in Noordwijk, The Netherlands. It includes one hundred member companies of ornamental plant breeders, producers and distributors.

Testing Plants

Fleuroselect members submit plants for testing at the 33 private trial gardens distributed throughout Europe. The Fleuroselect Board, in union with members and the Entries and Evaluation Committee, appoints trial holders at individual gardens and expert independent judges to evaluate the entries. These gardens cover a wide range of climate conditions and include these countries:

- Denmark,
- France,
- Germany,
- Italy,
